ATTRIBUTION CHARTS DESCRIPTION

Detailed attributions for your particular strategy can be found in the charts on the preceding pages. These tables contrast the portfolio's exposure to various factors (e.g., size, value, sector, profitability, region, or country) against a stated index. "Attribution by Size" is broken down into market cap ranges. The largest stocks are included in the top bucket and the smallest names are captured in the bottom bucket. "Attribution by Relative Price (value vs. growth)" breaks its observations down into distinct segments, including growth-oriented stocks (highest relative price) in the top bucket and value stocks (lowest relative price) in the bottom bucket. The "Attribution by Sector" table analyzes portfolio performance relative to the index by sector, as defined by GICS (with the exception of REITs). "Attribution by Profitability" is represented in percentiles. Lower profitability stocks are included in the top buckets, and higher profitability stocks are captured in the bottom buckets. Finally, attributions are broken down by region and/or individual country exposure.

ATTRIBUTION DEFINITIONS

Portfolio Allocation: Measures the weighting differences between the portfolio and index across the different buckets. Generally speaking, if the portfolio has greater (lesser) weight in a particular bucket than the index does and that segment of the index outperforms the overall index return, there will be positive (negative) attribution.

Portfolio Composition: Measures the underlying returns based on the composition of the assets held within each segment of the attribution chart. If, for example, the index and portfolio weights in a particular size bucket were identical, but the underlying composition of the stocks held within that bucket were different, there would be different return results. More generally, if the portfolio's composition of securities within a particular bucket resulted in higher (lower) returns than the index's, attribution results for that bucket would be positive (negative).

Interaction Component: This component arises because returns compound; the wealth in a portfolio grows multiplicatively, not additively. Thus, a difference in returns between the portfolio and index in one period causes a difference in their dollar growth—their growth of wealth—in all future periods. The interaction component captures this compounding effect that occurs over multiple time periods. Over more volatile periods, this number can at times be inflated.

ADDITIONAL NOTES

From time to time, attributions may appear to have inconsistent results. Some causes for potential divergence include:

- When the portfolio or index has a very small allocation to a bucket and the return of the holding(s) in that bucket is extreme (e.g., if the index has a 1% allocation to a bucket with a 102% return but the portfolio has a 10% allocation and a 10% return), allocation and composition contributions can become exaggerated.
- The return of the index in a particular bucket may not be indicative of the actual return of that market segment because there is no weight (or only a few names) in that bucket. For example, if a portfolio invests in Canada while the index does not, the index attribution would have a 0% weight and a null return for Canada, most likely creating misleading results.
- Since attributions are computed on a month-over-month basis, attribution results may be inconsistent with the average weights and returns shown in the buckets during periods of extreme volatility. The linked tables may in some cases show contributions opposite to what one would expect from the overall weights and returns allocation.
- The “Other” category at the bottom of the attribution chart captures differences such as timing of foreign exchange rates, pricing methodology, trading, turnover, and other considerations.
- In non-US funds, the “Other” category may contain differences due to fair value adjustments. Fair value is used in all of Dimensional’s non-US mutual funds to account for potential information that transpires between local market close and the striking of fund NAVs. Please note that fair value adjustments are beginning- and endpoint-specific and should not be perceived as a consistent source of higher or lower expected returns. Indices are not subject to fair value adjustments.

Standardized Performance Data and Disclosures

Performance data shown represents past performance. Past performance is no guarantee of future results, and current performance may be higher or lower than the performance shown. The investment return and principal value of an investment will fluctuate so that an investor's shares, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than their original cost. Consider the investment objectives, risks, and charges and expenses of the Dimensional funds carefully before investing. For this and other information about the Dimensional funds, please read the prospectus carefully before investing. Dimensional Fund Advisors LP is an investment advisor registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Disclosure regarding Dimensional ETFs:

ETFs trade like stocks, fluctuate in market value and may trade either at a premium or discount to their net asset value. ETF shares trade at market price and are not individually redeemable with the issuing fund, other than in large share amounts called creation units. ETFs are subject to risk similar to those of stocks, including those regarding short-selling and margin account maintenance. Brokerage commissions and expenses will reduce returns.

For ETFs, the market price return is calculated from closing prices as determined by the fund's listing exchange. If you trade your shares at another time, your return may differ.

Risks include loss of principal and fluctuating value. Investment value will fluctuate, and shares, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than original cost.

Small and micro cap securities are subject to greater volatility than those in other asset categories.

International and emerging markets investing involves special risks, such as currency fluctuation and political instability. Investing in emerging markets may accentuate these risks.

Sector-specific investments focus on a specific segment of the market, which can increase investment risks.

Fixed income securities are subject to increased loss of principal during periods of rising interest rates. Fixed income investments are subject to various other risks, including changes in credit quality, liquidity, prepayments, call risk, and other factors. Municipal securities are subject to the risks of adverse economic and regulatory changes in their issuing states.

Real estate investment risks include changes in real estate values and property taxes, interest rates, cash flow of underlying real estate assets, supply and demand, and the management skill and creditworthiness of the issuer.

Sustainability funds use environmental and social screens that may limit investment opportunities for the fund.

Commodities include increased risks, such as political, economic, and currency instability, and may not be appropriate for all investors. The portfolio may be more volatile than a diversified fund because the portfolio invests in a smaller number of issuers and commodity sectors.

The fund prospectuses contain more information about investment risks.
